

Resellers Beware!

FTC Probing Counterfeit Printer Cartridges being Sold as “Remanufactured”

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is looking into claims of anti-competitive practices by companies falsely labeling newly built printer cartridges as “remanufactured.”

There is an enormous amount of imported printer cartridges flooding into the U.S. market through online retailers such as Amazon, eBay, Walmart and, other online retailers. These printer cartridges are new built nonrecyclable and are falsely labeled and advertised as Remanufactured, deceiving consumers that they are buying a recycled product.

Many states are banning the use of the recycling logo or reference to a product as being recycled, if the product or packaging doesn't meet statewide recycling criteria. States are recognizing that many resellers of products are using deceptive practices to sell their products as being made from recycled material or being remanufactured.

The FTC has received complaints of resellers who are selling printer cartridges that are new built and falsely labeled as remanufactured. The companies below have been identified for using this anti-competitive tactic:
